

2010 Jeb Stuart High School (JSHS) Ethics Day – Goes School-Wide

On November 18, JSHS teacher planning committee lead by Vice Principal, Frank Brady and including BXRC member and Interact teacher liaison, Jim Holcomb, brought their ethics program to all JSHS students.

From its inception, four years ago by JSHS teacher leaders, BXRC continues to provide financial support to help off-set school expenses, and member-volunteers that support teachers' classroom instructions the day of the event.

This year a classroom teacher instruction lesson plan approach was implemented that also integrated the school's new TV broadcasting to all grades. While all classes shared certain broadcasted theme presentations, more-grade specific content was also pre-recorded and beamed to only those specific grades. BXRC is very supportive of JSHS annual efforts, and a fan of this year's approach. These JSHS efforts support and mature both the ethical decision-making ability of their students, as well as engrain the character for them to properly act in a good citizen and ethical manner. The whole lesson plan drove home the core point that leadership in acting ethically may and most times does come from and requires every individual to both lead and, other times, follow doing the right thing for their individual benefit, as well as benefit to all. BXRC member, Juanita Balenger recorded a presentation for, as well as participated with, 9th grade classes about safer and more protective ways to use Internet and social media. Thanks also, to BXRC members, Lloyd Stoessell, Kevin Holland, Dave & Pat Borowski, David Feld, Susan Lydick, Bob Polson, Clyde Williams, and Karey Starnes, for working with 12th grade. Ask these members about their experiences, and the benefits that they received when placing "service above self." Then find out more about and get more involved with the many other BXRC projects still to be accomplished this year!
